

Mr. Chang is Managing Director of The China Cleantech Collaboratory, a China-based incubator-accelerator and venture capital firm that invests and assists Western and Chinese cleantech companies excel in China to succeed globally.

Mr. Chang's professional background includes serving as a consultant at McKinsey & Company' Greater China Offices where he helped develop a 30-year Energy and Environmental Program for the Taiwan government. He also been an entrepreneur in China leading two venture capital backed start-ups and oversaw a government sponsored technology incubator. Mr. Chang also was Assistant Vice-President at GE Equity in Silicon Valley, and later moved back to China to establish the China funds of Intellectual Ventures, an intellectual property investment firm, and VC firm Chrysalix Clean Energy Capital.

Fred attended Beijing University, the University of Michigan and the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Business.